🛃 Area J Regional Director's Report

October 13, 2006

by Jim Abram

¶irst of all,I would like to tell the world that my daughter Melissa gave birth to a very beautiful baby girl named Kira Lee Maria on Sunday morning, September 24th at 6:01 am. She weighed 7 pounds 13.6 ounces. Do I sound slightly pleased? You bet I am. Wendy and I are extremely pleased and proud to be.. oh my god... granddparents!.... She and her husband, Dan, are enjoying their new role as proud parents. With that out of my system, I can now get down to my brief report.

OCP meetings

As you will see elsewhere in this issue, the time and place has been set for our first meeting on the review of portions of our Official Community Plan (OCP). The process will unfold and explain to you how we will be setting up four "neighbourhood" groups that will deal with issues around residential and rural development. These meetings, in general, will be focused on only these issues at this time. We want to have realistic expectations and realistic time lines so that we can move on to other areas of concern in the future. I hope that you will enjoy this process and that it will prove to be productive.

APC, QCA, and other acronyms

After many years of having a dedicated Advisory Planning Commission (APC), modelled on various types of representation from geographical to sectoral to random, I eventually disbanded my APC about a year ago. It was a difficult decision to make but a necessary one. The public perception had gotten way out of line with reality and the people that sat as volunteers on the APC were suffering from that perception. The only sure way to fix it was to end it. Which I did. So, that left a bit of a void in the "advisory" department. I have managed to this point but would like to put another body in place of a less formal nature that can help me out with this huge job of governing our area (not just Quadra, you know).

After the last planning process that the Regional District conducted (the infamous Bylaw Review), a grass roots group of islanders came together under the name of the Ouadra Community Association (QCA) to try and deal with the by law revisions in the first case, and later to give advice on other issues to me as the Director for Area J. Having had a number of meetings with the group, we recently agreed that it would be beneficial if I was to put together a group of advisors in a less formal structure than an APC or the QCA. The model that I would like to try is similar to what I have suggested for these upcoming community meetings to deal with the OCP.I am suggesting that "neighbourhoods" should come together in informal meetings in someone's home or wherever, over coffee or tea, or whatever, and come up with a person that they feel will represent that neighbourhood's interests to me, through a group of neighbourhood advisors. Now, bear with me folks... this is not completely formulated in my head at this point, but I wanted to share it with you in its infancy, like I did with the QCA, last week. I have come up with 13 "neighbourhoods" around the island and I would want to throw in my Alternate Director, if he was willing, for good measure.

I think that some of these groups could possibly be formed during the OCP group formation process since some of the areas will overlap processes. So, I intend to see how it plays out and how well received it is in general. If it doesn't work, then back to the drawing board.

I want to thank all of the past members of the QCA for all of the work that they did on the Bylaw revisions and to the present members for the time and effort they have put into working with me towards a solution that will see more public involvement in local government. For the record, I got involved in this business of representation for the very same reasons: Public involvement and local control!. Stay tuned, folks!

Recycling and garbage (there is a difference!)

Well... I must say that I have had some pretty discouraging days over the past month with regard to the beautiful recycling area that we constructed for household recyclables. I know it only takes one or two people that don't go along with the program to make it hard on the rest of the conscientious ones, but I really did expect a bit more from islanders in this case. We are a fairly knowledgeable group of people about recycling and about the benefits of doing it. We are also quite aware of the difference between pure garbage and recyclables. Yet there have been truckloads of garbage dumped at the site in the Cove a number of times this past month. It must stop or we will lose our site entirely. If this means more self policing, great!. If it means surveillance cameras, so be it. It would be unfair for all islanders to suffer for the actions of a few. Please help set this straight.

That's it for this issue. Feel free to call me between the hours of 8:30 am and 7:00 pm, Monday through Friday (not on weekends, folks!) at 285-3355, or you can fax me at 285-3533 or you can email me at anytime at abramfam@oberon.ark.com, or by mail at Box 278 in the Cove, VOP 1N0... Lots of choices!

Respectfully submitted, Jim Abram

Island Forum

Dear Editor,

It is not practical or logical to spend $302 million dollars on a new regional hospital away from both Campbell River and Comox.

The locations of the existing hospitals are very convenient to these population centres and to the north end of Vancouver Island as well as nearby coastal islands.

If the $306 million for a new hospital, plus the total of $25 million for upgrades to the two existing hospitals was put together there would be over $165 million for each hospital to become a first rate high tech facility.

Sincerely

Richard D. (Mickey) Smith

Dear Editor,

The Provincial Government recently mailed most of us a large format 4-pager entitled "What Choices Would You Make?" It's subtitled "Budget 2007 Consultation Paper" and seeks public input to the "Select Standing Committee on Finance and Government Services."

It asks us to rank 11 options in order of preference. It doesn't mention our ferry service, though it does have a category titled "Building infrastructure like roads, schools and hospitals." It also asks for a written-in answer to "Where do you think the budget should spend more?'

Unless you are happy with the government's legislated direction to BC Ferries to move continuously toward user pay, you should consider telling them the next budget should include more money for BC Ferries' infrastructure and for the "service fee" paid to BC Ferries for the operation of the "minor" routes which are our "road" connections.

If you've already burned the mail-out to start one of your first fall fires, you can access the form and fill it out online at www.leg. bc.ca/budgetconsultations. The deadline is October 20. The committee, consisting of six Liberals and four NDPers, will report on Nov. 15. If they hear a lot about ferry financing, it might give them second thoughts about their present course.

John Sprungman, Chair

Campbell River-Quadra-Cortes

Ferry Advisory Committee

BC Ferries' Pt2 Is On Our Radar

by John Sprungman

Decisions which will determine the fares and the level of ferry service for Quadra and Cortes and the rest of the B.C. coast from 2008 to 2012 will be made by the provincial government over the next six to nine months. It has become clear that the corporate structure the government created for BC Ferries in 2003 has disadvantaged coastal communities by freezing service levels and significantly increasing fares without giving us an effective way to have our concerns heard.

Ferry Advisory Committees, nominated by and including many elected local government representatives from all over the B.C. coast, are now focused on influencing the conditions and price caps the government will specify in the second performance term (PT2) of the Coastal Ferry Services Contract which will take effect April 1, 2008.

As chair of the Campbell River-Quadra-Cortes FAC, I attended the annual general meeting of BC Ferries in Victoria Sept. 21-22 and met with the chairs of 11 other FACs. Together we represented all of BC Ferries' routes from the Southern Gulf Islands to Prince Rupert except the Mainland-Vancouver Island ferries. We also met for several hours with BC Ferries' President & CEO David Hahn and a number of his executives.

The information we gleaned from these meetings and from talking with each other made it abundantly clear that it is a high priority for coastal communities to establish a process for direct consultation between FACs and the provincial government so we have a say in the future of our ferry services.

To pursue this, we will return to Victoria Nov. 17 to meet with officials of the Ministry of Transport. Meanwhile, our local FAC is meeting with BC Ferries' management from Noon to 4 p.m. Friday, Oct. 20 at the Maritime Heritage Centre in Campbell River. This is a public meeting. Concerns regarding our local ferry service also may be sent, phoned or emailed to any member of the committee. See the adjoining list of members with their contact info.

Seven members of our FAC had an informative meeting on Quadra Sept. 15 with Ferry Commissioner Martin Crilly. Since many of our FAC members are new, it was helpful to get an overview of the structure the government imposed on our ferry system. Having been a FAC member since 1997,I know the Coastal Ferry Act was legislated without any consultation with us or with the public. In future issues of the DI, I will attempt to explain this structure and the effects it has had on BC Ferries and on our ferry service. I will also publish regular reports on local issues.

I would like to thank all of the fine people who work on our ferries and in our terminals for their efforts over the summer to manage the heavy traffic we experienced. It is not an easy task under time pressure to deal with the number of overloads we have. We need some creative efforts to reduce the problems next summer, and the people who work on the ships and on shore must be involved for us to find solutions. We will also need a little help from Victoria.

Mad Cowboy - A Documentary

'Mad Cowboy' is Howard Lyman's video based on his book 'Mad Cowboy: Plain truth from the Cattle Rancher Who Won't Eat Meat'. Howard Lynn is a fourth generation dairy farmer and cattle rancher. He became a chemical rancher and when he saw the destructiveness of what he was doing he changed his methods and became a vegan. His mission now is to expose to the public the danger and destructiveness of these cattle raising practices especially Mad Cow Disease

This video is a must-see for anyone concerned about their health and the food they eat.

Mad Cowboy is being shown on Sunday, October 15 between 5 pm and 7 pm in Room 1 at the Community Centre in conjunction with the Raw Food Potluck. Bring a raw, vegan food item to share (sliced fruit and veggies is an easy idea) and enjoy.

Meeting for a Family Friendly Quadra

Creating Community for Kids, a local group of parents and interested community members on Quadra, meet together to plan and promote healthy development for the young children on the Island. Recently, parents in the Mom's and Babes group suggested that they would like to establish breastfeeding friendly areas on Quadra. This idea was brought forward to the Creating Community for Kids coalition, because, while Quadra is very breastfeeding friendly, it can sometimes be difficult to find a comfortable spot to feed one's baby. Parent's who find themselves nursing in the cold rain, inside cramped cars while their toddler gets restless, wish for a comfortable arm chair in a warm corner of welcoming businesses. They hope to identify breastfeeding friendly areas with small signs or decals that would help nursing mothers readily find a safe comfortable place.

We'd be grateful to businesses that are interested in establishing such a spot and are asking the community for any comfortable chairs that they might be able to donate. You're involvement in this initiative is a wonderful way to support and foster healthy family choices and relationships on Quadra. Community involvement is crucial to making this endeavor possible. To all who respond, we'd like to thank you in advance for making mother's lives a little easier in promoting and enabling health for our next generation; as well as a warm thanks to the Upper Realm and On Root Greenhouse who have already indicated that they would be interested in becoming breastfeeding friendly sites. For more information please contact Natasha Rowe at 923-7734 or Lisa Scalapino at 285-2314.

Finally the Jazz Berry Jam, still hot from a successful gig at the Haig-Brown Festival in Campbell River will also play tunes by Charlie Parker, John Coltrane and other Jazz greats.

Light supper, sandwiches, drinks, munchies and sweets are available at the Aroma starting at 6 p.m. & throughout the evening. Music starts at 7:30 p.m., Sat. Oct 24. Mitlenatch -Neptune Project

The Mitlenatch Natural History Society would like to invite you to attend a presentation on the Neptune Canada Project. Dr. Brian Bornhold from the University of Victoria will be speaking on this fascinating topic at 7.30 on Friday, October 13th, at the Quadra Community Centre. Everyone is welcome (non-members $2.50 at the door).

The Neptune Canada Project

The Neptune Canada Project is part of a U.S.-Canada venture to build the world's largest cable-linked ocean observatory. Designed as a cutting edge scientific observatory, Neptune is intended to reveal the awe and wonder of our earth-ocean system.

Neptune's innovative new approach will address earth-ocean processes far beyond the scope of traditional ship-based oceanographic exploration. Researchers will be able to study the interactive geological, chemical, physical and biological processes that make up the dynamic earth-ocean system.

What is NEPTUNE?

The NEPTUNE project will lay 3,000 km of powered, electro-optical cable over the Juan de Fuca tectonic plate, a 200,000 sq. km region off the coasts of British Columbia, Washington and Oregon. The Neptune cabled observatory will operate in water depths as great as 3,000 meters and will feature many seafloor nodes, each hosting a variety of sensors and experiments.

Knowledge gained through Neptune will be applied to many global and regional issues, including: biological productivity in the ocean, important for understanding changes in fish stocks earthquakes, tsunamis and other hazards to human safety life in the deep ocean occurrence of gas hydrates on continental margins modelling regional climate prediction and long-term climate change

How will NEPTUNE revolutionize ocean science?

Connected to the extensive underwater cabled observatory will be an armada of scientific instruments. The network will contain instruments positioned beneath the seafloor in boreholes, on the seafloor, and buoyed through the water column. Data will then be relayed to an operations centre in Victoria where it will be available in real-time to scientists, science centers, universities, schools, and museums across the nation and around the world.

For more information see www.venus. uvic.ca. and www.neptunecanada.ca.

Welcome Back - Cantabile

Quadra Island is excited to welcome back the London quartet of harmony and humour, Cantabile (can-TA-bi-lee), the cream of male a cappella ensembles. Their recipe for dazzling their audiences? Imagine "The Nylons", with their smooth vocals and rhythmic arrangements; stir in the offbeat and very British humour of Monty Python; add years of refining and perfecting the harmonies, vocal ease, and a musical range from Classical to jazz to Broadway, and garnish with four goodlooking guys in tuxedos - now, we're beginning to describe the riches that are Cantabile!

Founded as a student a cappella group, Cantabile got their start in a Tim Rice musical in London before turning to a headspinning global career. In the UK, Cantabile have sung in a huge variety of venues and programmes, including their performance of early polyphony through intimate jazz at London's Pizza On The Park, classical parodies before 40,000+ audiences attending the BBC's Proms In Hyde Park, and their premiere of a modern "musical Everest" at London's Covent Garden Festival. Overseas, they have toured extensively, from the United States (thirtynine states!) to South Africa and Southeast Asia. Nearer to home they make frequent visits to Europe, appearing in theatres and arts festivals as well as guesting with established bands and orchestras, such as the Zurich Chamber Orchestra.

Over the years, many have had fun with Cantabile, who have serenaded Michael Douglas at a California party, sung with Harry Connick Jr. and the Cologne Philharmonic, clocked up an appearance at the Greenwich Royal Observatory where they sang the "Minute Waltz", relaxed onstage on the Q.E.2 while it steamed from Fiji to Australia, undressed with Cliff Richard and Tim Rice at a charity premiere in London...their list of feats suggests the catalogue of a musical adventure touring company!

Amidst the breakneck travelling schedule, Cantabile finds time to record, having just completed their fourteenth CD, Lullabies and Goodbyes. Their recent competition wins have included the Eurovision Cabaret Prize, first prize in Festival l'Humour des Notes, and showcase prize in Quebec's Vox Pare - Scene Plaisir". Their 2006-2007 touring season will see them debuting in South Korea and Hong Kong in September, and performing in North America in October where they will sing a program which includes Johann Strauss, Jazz songs by Dankworth and Legrand, and some creamily lush West End/Broadway melodies.

A Cantabile performance is a wonderful evening out that gets the "feel-good" brain chemicals pumping. Join them at the Quadra Community Centre on Sunday, October 29th at 7PM. Advance tickets are available for $17 on Quadra at Quadra Crafts and Hummingbird Stationery, and in Campbell River at The Music Plant. Tickets will be available at the door for $20 for adults and $10 for youth. For information, call 285 3245.

Freecycle

Campbell River & Quadra Island now have their own Freecycle Group. Freecyle was founded in May 2003 by Deron Beal in Tucson. The Network provides individuals and non-profits an electronic forum to "recycle" unwanted items. One person's trash can truly be another's treasure! Membership to Freecycle is free. It is a GREAT alternative to people throwing stuff in the landfills.

Freecycle is a place to give or receive what you have and don't need or what you need and don't have -- a free cycle of giving which keeps stuff out of landfills.

To date there are 3,806 Freecycle Communities World Wide and 2,701,554 Members. It is a fast growing grassroots and entirely nonprofit movement of people who are giving (& getting) stuff for free in their own towns.

Our main rule: Everything posted must be free, legal, and appropriate for all ages.

To find the Campbell River/ Quadra Island group and to find more information about Freecycle go to www.freecycle.org

Peace Demonstration

The black dog said "Let's Howl" & they all howled. Bush said "Let's get oil" & the generals planned a war & working class youth gave their lives in these blood-soaked desert sands.

There were, however, some complains throughout the land & so Bush got Canada to do Afghanistan.

Peace doesn't come easy....Bringing the boys (& now the girls) home requires us to get off our ass & lend a hand: U.S. out of Iraq, Canada out of Afghanistan, No war in Iran.

Millions on this Planet Earth are demonstrating for peace on Saturday, October 28, the fifth anniversary of the US invasion of Afghanistan. Locally it's 2 p.m. at the CFB in Comox. So take the noon ferry from Quadra.

Any old peaceniks or hippies still hanging around? Maybe some young folks who don't dig war? Call Steve at 285-3323 for car pooling or pick-ups from the Cortes

The Vietnam war lasted 10 years. Will we wait that long to take an afternoon off and stand up for what we believe in?

Are we not all responsible for the future of Planet Earth?

This appeal may fail to move you. I'm aware of that.

I do it anyway. I simply cannot keep quiet, especially when the USA bombs and kills our guys once again when we are supposely fighting for them. It's so painful for me to watch these wars and do nothing but lift a pen. We need to walk our talk with our comrades and declare an end to war. Come ioin us!

New Term for Letz Sing Community Choir

Singing is our birthright.

Our voice carries the sound of our souls, it reflects who we are- both liberating and integrating us.

The Letz Sing Community Choir is based on the philosophy that everyone can sing. We have been meeting on Quadra, Black Creek and Comox since the fall of 2004. Each group includes a wonderful mix of seasoned singers and those who are new to singing with others. We sing songs from a diversity of origins in the tradition of call and response. Each session includes a warm-up, the introduction of new material, as well as time to sing favorites from a growing repertoire of familiar songs.

This choir has no performance commitment. WE sing each week for ourselves and each other. At the end of each term there is a "Big Sing" where we gather on a Sunday afternoon to hear the full strength of the Letz Sing community together in harmony.

Letz Sing is part of the growing UBUNTU choir network.

UBUNTU Choirs believe that;

"Singing in harmony reminds us to celebrate diversity, and to practice deep listening. As such, it is a path to practicing the craft of building a peaceful world." Director Tina Erickson was trained in song leading by Shivon Robinsong and Denis Donnelly of the Gettin' Higher choir of

If It Can Happen To Him, It Can Happen To You:

CONVERSATIONS WITH GOD in theaters this October

By Arielle Ford

Neale Donald Walsch never wanted his life story to become a movie. He didn't even "ask" to write a book. He certainly had no intention of writing 22 books, or becoming the NY Times best selling author of the "Conversations with God" series. Neale Donald Walsch was just a man down on his luck, out of answers, in desperate need of help, who cried out to God.

And then God answered.

In what became a series of late night "conversations," God revealed himself to Neale in an utterly earth shattering way. Walsch posed an endless stream of questions about life's mysteries and uncertainties, and just like that, God illuminated the answers, one by one, to all of Walsch's desperate cries. Walsch filled dozens and dozens of legal pads recording these conversations, and their messages became the basis for a book, and now-a major feature film.

"I turned to God for answers because I assumed he had them," says Walsch via phone from his home in Ashland, Oregon where parts of the film were shot. "I was feeling terribly sorry for myself, and was convinced God was out to get me. If he had all the answers, why couldn't he share them with me?" he asks. "If everyone else knew the answers, why couldn't I?"

Walsch, in the movie, is played with transcendent beauty by Henry Czerny. (Most recently seen in The Exorcism of Emily Rose, and The Pink Panther.) Set against the backdrop of southern Oregon, "Conversations with God," the movie, captures the rich landscape where Walsch's real life troubles actually occurred.

"Conversations with God" is an emotional film that follows the most difficult period of one man's life. But, just as the on-screen Walsch is buoyed up by the wisdom he receives from within and through God, viewers will leave theaters anxious to have their own conversations with God.

Centre for Positive Living will host a screening of Conversations with God on October 20, 7:30 PM and October 22, 1:30 PM at the Campbell River Community Centre, and October 22, 7 PM at the Quadra Island Community Centre. Tickets are $11 and can be purchased at Explore and Inner Oddysey Books and Gifts. For more information please call 285-3224.

Garage Sale Recycling and Quadra/Philippines Meeting

The Quadra Philippines Connection invites the public to a general meeting to discuss current finances and future fund-raising garage sales. The meeting will take place at 1 pm on Sunday, October 22nd in Room 2 at the Q. community center. We will begin with a 10 minute video that gives an informative overview of IAT's work in the Philippines through an interview done by Shaw TV last year.

One of the main questions people always ask following the annual giant garage sale is "What happens to all of the remaining stuff?"As many of you are aware, even after greatly surpassing our financial goal at the end of each sale, a huge abundance of items still remain. RECYCLING is a huge part of this event and fortunately committed volunteers always come forward to help with this aspect. Everything is once more sorted through, this time to be sent off to many destinations including the Hospital Thrift Store, Nifty Thrifty and Salvation Army and this year, even books to the Campbell River Auction.

As well, Birthright and the Women's Transition House are often recipients of our remainders as well as the Philippines children themselves. Last year a member of a Campbell River church gathered clothing to be part of a container going to Africa. This year left-over clothing was gathered by an individual planning to distribute it during his vacation in Mexico. (Something to keep in find for all you future travelers!)

Totally unsuitable clothing becomes rags for local mechanics and other items deemed "past their prime" are sorted for recycling under the categories of plastic, metal, cardboard and glass. Anything remaining that does not fit into these categories is taken to the Campbell River Landfill.

As you can imagine, this requires a tremendous amount of work and energy, and therefore the need for an adequate number of volunteers at the end of the day. That is the reason we request that people donate only truly saleable items. Unfortunately, computers have become a problem. This year a large carload of computers were taken to CompuCycle in Cumberland. CompuCycle "promotes the responsible disposal and recycling of computers, diverting hazardous waste from landfills, and re-use of computers to organizations and underprivileged individuals". Monitors are accepted for the recycling fee of $10 and printers for $5. Thankfully, CompuCycle agreed to recycle almost $200 worth of left over computers from our sale for only $80. For future we request that used computers not be donated to the Quadra Philippines Garage Sale. We are suggesting instead, that all used computers be taken to CompuCycle for redistribution. They can be reached at 250-336-8136 or http://www. compucycle@iscn.ca If you have any input about any of the above, please join us on October 22nd or call Carol at 285-3035.

Quadra RCMP Make Pot Bust

On 2006-10-05, QUADRA ISLAND RCMP executed a search warrant under the Controlled Drugs and Substances Act (CDSA) at an address on Whaletown Road on Cortes Island.

Police discovered an indoor marihuana grow operation at this location, seizing 88 plants. More significantly, it appears that this house was being used as a processing station for drying and packaging harvested marihuana. The majority of the building was dedicated to this purpose and it appears a number of people were involved in this criminal enterprise. Police seized approximately 75 kg of processed marihuana 'bud', much of which they believe was destined for markets off the island.

One adult male and one adult female have been charged under the CDSA with production of marihuana and possession for the purpose of trafficking. The investigation is continuing.

Since the initial arrests in this investigation, police have heard from numerous people who are fed up with criminals who take advantage of the laid back, friendly and accepting attitudes of islanders and bring this criminal activity into our backyards and the process tarnish the reputation of this beautiful island.

Illicit drug trafficking and organized crime are global problems of immense proportions. A 75 kg seizure of marihuana is not huge in the global sense, however, considering that 1 gram of marihuana will produce between 3 to 5 marihuana cigarettes or 'joints', 75 kg represents between 225,000 and 375,000 joints that will kept out of the hands of our youth.

We would like to take this opportunity to remind people that they can make a difference, just by passing on their observations of suspicious activity to the members of Quadra Detachment or by calling CRIMESTOPPERS. In either situation, they can rest assured that their identities will be protected and that one little piece of information may be all that police have been looking for to bring an investigation to a successful conclusion.

People often say that the problem is too large and that shutting down one branch of criminal activity just causes another to sprout up somewhere else. All I can say to that is that a small drop of contamination is easier to stamp out than a large drop, the point is to keep stomping. Where would we be if the environmentalists had adopted the attitude that the problem was too big, the polluters were too rich, etc. To paraphrase from their playbook, 'It,s time to think globally and act locally!'.

Friday Flicks Presents Eve and the Fire Horse

October 20th, Q.C.C.

Doors 7:30 - Showtime 7:45

Adm: $4.75 - $3.75 snr/stu

Eve, a precocious 9-y-o with an overactive imagination, was born in the year of the Firehorse, notorious among Chinese families for producing the most troublesome children. When her mother chops down their apple tree, Eve fears the worst. This must be an omen of bad things to come.

Her eleven year-old sister, Karena, comes to her aid with the authority of the elder and her pan-religious fantasies of spiritual sainthood. For Karena, religion is a feel-good umbrella, and she places a Jesus figurine on the mantle alongside the ceramic Buddha and Goddess already there. Next, she enrolls the two of them in a Catholic Sunday School in the hope that this will hasten assimilation. Others in the family circle aren't quite so ecumenical.

Eve faces the challenges of childhood in the pre-multicultural Vancouver of the 1970s with fanciful humour and wide-eyed wonder. The film enters the mystical imagination of the child and does so in a way that sparkles with visual magic. The cinematography has a pleasingly dreamy quality. The production design offers a non-glitzy take on period detail, aided by a winning combination of the '70's pop songs and crackly old records in Cantonese. The children give astonishingly mature performances.

Both a finely wrought period piece and a slice of delicately captured childhood, "Eve & the Fire Horse" is an exceptional feature debut for writer/director Julia Kwan.While telling the story through the optimistic lens of a child, she keeps sentiment on the sharp, rather than the Pollyanna side.

Asian American cinema, for all its development, offers few films for or about children. EVE & THE FIRE HORSE claims this territory, and in a way that's "funny, touching, and thoroughly enchanting" (Toronto Globe and Mail). Appealingly adult in its embrace of larger issues, and delightful for all ages, EVE luxuriates in warmth, candor and empathy.

Making the World A Better Place

In September, Quadra School's grade 3 class hiked the Kay Dubois Trail. We explored the beach, built forts and enjoyed lunch in the sun before hiking out again. On the return hike, we put on rubber gloves and picked up litter - piles and piles of litter! The children were proud of their efforts as they posed beside our bulging garbage bags. We remembered the story about "Miss Rumphius" who made the world a better place by planting lupines - and everyone agreed that we made our world a better place by cleaning up the Kay Dubois Trail.

West Coast Gardens

Come out to the Garden Club next Monday and hear Don McWatt from Island Specialty Nursery in Chemainus discuss his philosophy for West Coast Gardens. The presentation titled 'Nature is my Guide' will discuss the gardener's relationship with the land - how the gardener influences land and how land influences the gardener. Don's gardens encourage the natural flora to coexist with domestic plants. He will explain how to combine the aesthetic garden with food husbandry. This wholistic approach will show us how to design our gardens for easy maintenance and creative sustainability. How can we allow our gardens to remain natural habitat for wildlife - what can we plant to encourage the birds to inhabit our home surroundings? He will discuss seasonal variety and how to respect the garden during times of summer drought. Don is a specialist grower and propagates domestic plants such as cyclamen, iris, hellebores, bamboo and native plants such

Celebrate The Elements

In this time of enormous changes for humanity and the natural world of which we are a part there is a need for a different approach to life, values and decision-making. It does not have to be complex. We can begin with respect, love and then celebration of the amazing universe and all its parts: Air, Fire, Water, Earth and Spirit. These are essential elements of all that happens on this planet and in our universe and need to be respected. As we develop respect for these natural forces we will not tolerate the deliberate destruction of the ecosystems, and the rampant use of domination, poisons and the justification of greed, which is now threatening our planet. Developing a relationship with the elements of Nature moves us toward addressing and finding solutions to the huge amounts of suffering experienced by the majority of the 6 billion human and countless other inhabitants, and the pressing need to reverse the damage to our planet,s life supporting systems.

The Pagan approach of celebrating nature can be reclaimed as a sacred ritual to replace the destructive and dominating paradigm of the last few thousand years. Let,s get back to basics and celebrate the natural forces, which the Pagans call the Goddess or Mother Earth. The celebrating of those natural events such as the solstices and the equinoxes and the full moons are part of respecting the natural forces free of any religious dogma. We can take time and celebrate the elegance of nature more often – it,s magical and powerful.

A workshop on the celebration of the elements will be held on Quadra, November 11/12 for those interested. It will be based on the tradition of the reclaiming approach to Wiccan knowledge (www.reclaiming.org) as they fit into the 21st century. For more information call Michael 285-2330.

Kia Kadiri – Feel This

Plays The Gorge Hall- Cortes Island Sat, Oct 21

TICKETS AVAILABLE AT THE DOOR -

In the last 5 years, Kia Kadiri has become a west coast phenomenon. Drawing on hip hop, jazz, funk and soul to create a sound that is truly universal, she has emerged as a stand out artist from a scene that has produced some of this country's most exciting urban artists.

Born to a Nigerian father and Irish mother in Liverpool, UK, she spent her formative years in Victoria, BC where she got involved with musical theatre and became active in many community and youth outreach programs. Once out of High School, she was soon established on the local music scene - cutting her teeth at local MC battles with urban contemporaries like Prevail and Moka Only, while holding down various weekly club nights with her live bands D.I.G.G. and Stirfry. At the same time she was mentoring under some of Victoria's best jazz musicians and winning jazz camp scholarships to the Victoria Conservatory of Music, and John Capon's renowned Summer Jazz Academy at Malaspina College in Nanaimo.

In 2001 Kadiri relocated to Vancouver were she was instantly in demand as a live performer, recording artist and conscious member of the urban community performing regularly at benefits like Sistahood and Rock for Choice. Her credits are as wide ranging as her skills and interests: she was a featured vocalist on last year's Battleaxe Records release from LA underground hero Abstract Rude; she's recorded with indie queen Kinnie Starr and features prominently in her recent video Nearer: her duet with Prevail on the track Cabin Fever was released on Lester's debut on Nettwerk Records; and she has done voice-over work for Xbox, the Ham Terro cartoon and several Vancouver area radio commercials.

Now after almost a decade of turning heads, Kia has released her debut full length recording "FeelThis", on Maximum/Universal. Kia's eclectic vision really shines through on Feel This and the 16 track epic is a powerful document that is deep in both musicality and lyrical consciousness; it features everything from anti war outcries to infectious powerto-the-people rave-ups.

In the last decade hip hop has emerged as the worldwide voice of a new generation and a mode of artistic expression that knows no bounds. Kia Kadiri has the artistic depth, vocal skills, dynamic stage presence and universal message to become a shining new beacon for that movement and the release of Feel This marks a bold step into the spotlight for an artist who's time has come.

Latin Sounds to Raise Funds for New Society

The North Vancouver Island Canadian Latin American Society (NORVICLAS) is a newly incorporated, local non-profit organization. NORVICLAS is committed to facilitating the successful settlement and integration of Latin American individuals residing in Northern Vancouver Island and the surrounding islands; promoting, teaching and sharing the Latin American heritage; and offering occasional humanitarian support to emerging or disasterstricken, local, national and international communities.

NORVICLAS will be holding its first cultural fundraising event, on October 21,2006 at Quadra's Community Hall, from 6:30 to 11:30 p.m.

Quadra Islanders and Campbell Riverites will have the opportunity to dance to the beat of Alfredo Echevarria and Tchadas Leo's Latin rhythms; swing with Blue Moon Jazz Band; and enjoy Claudio Cartagena's selected South American, Caribean and North American D.J. pieces. Adding to this musical kaleidoscope there will be Mexican and local treats available at the Community Hall concession.

The cost for this family event will be $10.00 (adults) and $ 5.00 (children under 8), in advance, available at Hummingbird in Quadra and at the Musicians Trading Post in Campbell River. Prices at the door will be $12.00 and $ 7.00, respectively.

Those interested in volunteering for this event may contact 830 0611 or 923 7963 (evenings) or leave a message

'n a recent Globe and Mail newspaper, a fascinating article entitled "It's Like You Think I'm Your Slave or Something" puts forth a powerful argument in favour of children helping with household chores. To quote the article, "In a University of Minnesota study beginning...in the late 1960's, kids were followed from the age of 3 until their early 20's to determine what features of early childhood were good predictors of successful adulthood. Findings revealed that the most reliable gauge for kids' futures wasn't intelligence or affluence or family stability. It was whether or not they did their chores". In explanation of her conclusion that "chores are good for kids because they instill in them a sense of altruism, an unselfish interest in helping another person", Prof. Marilyn Rossman states that "it's one of the only activities in a child's life where they contribute to something larger than themselves, i.e. the family unit. This lays the groundwork for successful integration into society and the workforce. It also builds self-esteem."

My immediate "yes" gut reaction to the idea aroused my curiosity and I started to mull it over. Much time has been spent in Western psychology studying the forces which affect human development; much time in philosophy discussing the qualities of a "successful life". Although particular cultures and religions undoubtedly have some agreement on the answers, these age-old questions still have the power to generate disagreement among people. Even so, "chores are good" seemed downto-earth commonsense.

I settled on two primary needs that are satisfied when children do chores. The first is a sense of belonging. Unlike Rossman, I think that the idea of reciprocity, rather than altruism, creates meaning in the chore department. Contributing to and accepting some responsibility for the group, be it family, school, or other community entity, is basic to really feeling part of it. As one accepts the responsibility to contribute, one feels freer to expect the same of others. We call this the "social contract". Thus, my family eats together, and therefore we should all share, in our own ways, in the gardening, cooking, and clean-up. I enjoy the benefits of my school, and must therefore contribute by keeping my desk tidy, taking care of others, and contributing in my own way. Participating in a community means that I both give and take. It is a powerful dynamic.

The second need that is satisfied is the drive for independence; the bonus is the self-respect which growing independence and inner capacity strengthen. The practical learning that takes place through chores helps children toward self-reliance and the knowledge essential to looking after themselves. Helplessness, the root of so many life problems, is countered with know-how and experience.

Be they family, teachers, coaches, or friends, adults who care for and about children must provide opportunities for them to take growing measures of responsibility within family, school, and community structures. Whether in or outside the home, adults who help children to do their "chores" by teaching, modelling, and sharing co-operatively, strengthen everyone involved through both the activity and the relationship. Challenging as it may be at times, we owe it to them and their futures. It is our chore and our delight.

Until next time, Helen Moats 285 3560

 Halliday's Viewpoint

by Steven Halliday

ne of the impacts of rising gasoline prices has been a renewed surge of interest in smaller vehicles, with motorcycles and scooters becoming a much higher proportion of roadway traffic. Notwithstanding the fact that prices have been falling steadily since early August (Canadian average fell from approx. $1.19 to $.93 per litre since then) gas prices have risen an average of about 10.5% per year when measured from the 2004 low of $.69.As a side note, it is interesting how fuel prices drop sharply in the months leading up to US national elections - Bob Woodward's new book "State of Denial" depicts a scene of newly re-elected President G.W. Bush thanking Saudi Prince Bandar in the Oval Office for increasing the oil supply in the months leading up to the November 2004 election, after which prices immediately skyrocketed again...but I'm sorry, I digress.

While fuel prices were not the only motivator, my wife decided to acquire a 2-wheeler last fall. She originally bought a street/trail combination Yamaha but quickly decided she wanted to be closer to the ground, and she now owns and operates a large touring bike - a Suzuki Marauder 800. She had previously owned motorcycles but had never obtained a Class 6 motorcycle endorsement; she realized that while she knew how to ride; she really didn't know how to ride safely. So she did the smart thing by seeking expert guidance, and consequently has been riding happily and safely since October 2005.

Since then I have been undergoing some degree of gentle persuasion, such as...I know you'd love it... motorcycle riding was a blast...taking trips together would be such fun...I think you get my drift. I held out valiantly, citing a variety of perfectly good reasons not to acquiesce, but my defenses were eventually worn down as my curiosity increased, particularly after looking at several new motorcycles. Having decided to get a bike, I then followed Norma's path and contacted Comox Valley Driving School in Courtenay, who offer the only ICBC Motorcycle Certification Program on the North Island. Proprietors Rod and Wendy Wiseman are qualified instructors and experienced riders, and when faced with a class as large as ours (13 people) they work it together. The entire course, which, if fully completed, almost guarantees success, lasts about 30 hours and is very intensive. The first 10 hours are conducted in a classroom setting on a Thursday and Friday evening, and consists of general motorcycle knowledge, road rules and safety (with heavy emphasis on safety) - certainly necessary but nonetheless yawn inspiring. However, this is followed by an allday Saturday familiarization with the schoolsupplied bikes in a large vacant parking lot. Sunday sees you sharpen your skills on the parking lot in the morning, followed by the Motorcycle Safety Test. Rod and Wendy are certified examiners, and providing you pass the MST you'll spend Sunday afternoon tooling around the Comox Valley. An additional 4 or 5 hours of road work on Monday is your final prep for the Motor Vehicle Branch administered exam, which if all works out you'll pass on Tuesday. As you can imagine, you will eat, sleep and breathe motorcycles for the whole time - it's unavoidable.

My class provided a very diverse group, with ages ranging from late-20's (I assume) to midto-late 50's - six women and seven men. None of us had anything beyond basic motorcycle knowledge, and boy did it show, once Rod and Wendy had us trying slow turns and slaloms. You see, as Rod explained it, motorcycles are like bicycles - once they reach a certain speed (say 8 kph) they are inherently stable and tend to stay upright, and are then consequently easy to ride. But under about that speed they are inherently unstable, and mastering the skill of slow riding is absolutely nerve wracking as the bike seems to desperately try to buck you off, but is an essential skill to master. It certainly didn't help to see Rod do handstands and other unlikely tricks on his bike at slow speed, but it was indeed inspiring to us all. But by the end of the first parking lot exercises we all could (albeit somewhat unsteadily) ride in lines and circles and navigate the cones, though by no means were any of us confident, nor competent, and it was obvious we all had a long ways to go.

But get there we did - without one dropped bike and no scraped or broken bodies though definitely some egos were bruised - as all of us passed our MST's and were able to terrorize our instructors as well the public at large once we hit the road. Using radio links (and frantic signals and yells when that failed) Rod and Wendy soon got us to ride relatively smoothly and very, very safely. The total road component involved well over a hundred kilometers of riding through all types of varying road and traffic conditions, and by the time I completed my final one-on-one ride I was as confident as could be of success on my exam. In fact during the exam itself (the examiner and a driver follow you in a car and communicate by radio to an earpiece) it seemed that Rod or Wendy were riding with me, telling me to check over my shoulder or move over for that blind spot. The test was almost anticlimactic (though far from flawless), and it is indeed a credit to our teachers that all students whom had taken the exam had passed at the time of this writing, considering from where we had started.

Some memories really stand out - such as one student madly trying to regain control as he and his bike headed for a ditch at about 3 kph (he succeeded - barely). Or me, drawing stares of wonder from Wendy and others as water poured from the sleeve of my riding coat (I explained that I sweat very heavily when warm AND stressed). Or one of my favorites - watching one student almost strangling Rod in her joyful embrace upon learning she'd passed her test (I got a hug too, but with far less enthusiasm). But the memories that really stand out are the self-accomplishments - dozens of them, back to back over 5 days - as I gained control of the machine and confidence in its and my own capabilities. Also, the aching muscles (including the one between my ears) from hours on end of riding, tempered by the joy of hitting 110 kilometers per hour on the new highway on one of the school's 250cc Hondas, working its valves out to maintain the speed. And finally, the unrestrained grin that I wore the first time I piloted my wife's Marauder around Quadra, unsupervised, unrestricted and unbelievably happy. Learning the right way, from the right people, meant that my classmates and I could hit the roads being confident we were as well prepared to safely ride as anyone could possibly be.

See.Think.Do.Those are Rod's fundamentals for safe riding (or driving in general, for that matter). SEE what's happening (and be seen). THINK about all that is happening (and could happen) around you, and plan your moves. DO it - confidently but prepared to react. Thousands of people become statistics on motorcycles, often for no good reason. If you or a loved one is thinking of riding, take this course. You'll be a happier and safer rider, and being safe and happy on a motorcycle is about as good as it gets - easy riding indeed.

Quadra Children's Centre Celebrates 20 Years

66 Tt takes a community to raise a child" aptly describes the work done by the Quadra Children's Centre. This year the centre is celebrating two decades of quality child care on Quadra Island.

The Phil Thompson Memorial Daycare Society was named in honour of an island resident who was a great favourite of small children. The society has seen many changes since the daycare first opened in the Quadra Community Centre.

From there the daycare moved to the old Waldorf School buildings in Quathiaski Cove. With the help of islanders who took out personal loans, the school buildings were eventually purchased by the society and moved in 1990 to their current location on West Road.

Walking through the gate into the Children's Centre, I could not help but admire the towering tepee of beans that the children and staff grew this summer. Long time staff member Barb Lee, who is currently working as Administrative Director while Dee Conley is on maternity leave, told me the children love to play in the tepee.

"They planted the beans indoors and drew pictures of what they thought they would look like once they started to grow. Then they drew pictures of them when they were growingand they ate lots of them too!"

The children will save some bean seeds for next year and start the cycle all over again. They also grew carrots, tomatoes, watermelons, sunflowers, cosmos, nasturtiums, zinnias, and strawberries this summer.

Like the beans, the strawberries provided great enjoyment. The children ate them and made jam. A poster in the entranceway provides a visual record of the children watering the plants, harvesting the berries, and mashing them up for jam.

"They even made colourful labels for the jam jars," Barb noted, pointing to a photo of the finished product on the poster.

Documenting the children's activities is a key part of the Reggio Emilia approach employed by the Quadra Children's Centre. Reggio Emilia is an innovative childcare program originating in Italy that follows the children's interests and encourages them to investigate things that fascinate them. The Quadra Children's Centre decided to adopt this approach approximately 8 years ago.

"It has worked really well and we're still learning about how it best fits for us," said Barb.

She added that Reggio Emilia is very focused on the community. "It's called the 'circle of we'children, parents, teachers, and community are all in this together. We're all learning together and relationships are the very foundation of everything that's done."

The Quadra Children's Centre has received recognition in the wider early childhood community for its quality work. Last November the centre was pleased to host a conference on the Reggio Emilia approach. The conference, entitled '100 Languages: Making Learning Visible through Materials', attracted delegates from across

Board president Stacey Nielsen described the staff members of the Children's Centre as hugely committed and extremely skilled.

"All of them, as individuals, have taken the time to think about and develop their personal philosophy around child care. It isn't just a job for them-they put a lot of thought and energy into having a well-defined practice."

Once a month the staff meets with their mentor, Sue Fraser, author of the book 'Authentic Childhood'. At present they are reading about group learning and discussing how they can apply the techniques in the centre.

One group activity they tried recently was to organize the children into pairs and give each pair a long sheet of paper and some paints. The staff observed how the children interacted while working on their paintings. The resulting paintings, photos, and typed comments from the staff, including quotes from the children, are displayed in the hallway.

"It's so important that the children are open to others' ideas and also willing to discuss their own ideas when working in a group. We help them through conflicts and they learn to solve problems," Barb noted.

Reggio Emilia also stresses the importance of natural light. The Children's Centre benefits from a generous amount of light from large windows and skylights in the two main rooms.

The kitchen has space for quieter play activities, such as creating art. One of the staff's dreams for the centre is to have an atelier, or art room, where the children could do extended art projects.

Across from the kitchen is the 'block room' used for imaginary play. Well stocked with building blocks, a large dollhouse, books, musical instruments, and a wooden tunnel, this room also has plenty of free space for the children to invent their own games.

A large covered back deck back is perfect for rainy day outdoor play, and the side deck shaded by a lush grape arbour makes an ideal lunch spot in the summer. The centre's outdoor space features playgrounds and a large sand pit with a roof.

Stairs and a walkway connect the Children's Centre (preschool age kids) and the Quadra Kids (after school program) building. At present approximately 30 families are using the Children's Centre on a regular basis and 15 families use the after school program.

Barb noted that parental involvement has increased in the last 10 years.

"The parents are really active in the centre. We have a board in the hallway where people sign up for volunteer activities like doing the centre's laundry, splitting firewood, or helping at fund raising events," she said.

Julie Watson, whose daughter, Dynah, attends Quadra Kids and son, Munroe, attends the Children's Centre, said she appreciates the facility for many reasons.

"I can go to work and know that my children are in a safe place, having fun, and learning to become good people. The centre is a wonderful place—I really enjoy getting together with the teachers, kids, and other parents at the afternoon daycare parties," she said.

Fund raising, thanks to a succession of hardworking boards, has been a core reason for the Children's Centre success.

As Stacey said, there simply would not be enough money for it to function otherwise.

Quadra Children's Centre is pleased to celebrate its 20th anniversary by holding a Goods and Services Auction. The board and staff hope this one will be their biggest yet.

Thanks to many generous donations from Quadra and Campbell River businesses, there will be a wide range of goods and services to bid on. "It will be a fun evening out for adults with the proceeds supporting the continued good work of the Children's Centre," said Stacev.

The Goods and Services Auction will take place at the Quadra Community Centre on Saturday, October 14 from 7-10 p.m. Appetizers and refreshments will be available.
