🛦 Area I Regional Director's Report

lanuary 19, 2007

by Jenny Hiebert

hope everyone enjoyed a pleasant and peaceful festive holiday season. One of my memorable experiences was the drive from Pt. McNeill to Campbell River the morning of December 24. We ran with a storm the entire time-encountering snow, at times mixed with rain, from Hoomak Lake to just north of Sayward. At times the swirling snow was mesmerizing and beautiful. However, road conditions slowly deteriorated and traveling became tense. The worst conditions were just before we started the descent into the Sayward Valley. A number of cars were off the road—some intentionally, others not. Brian and I decided to carry on hoping the snow would turn to rain as we dropped into the valley-which thankfully, it did. From there onward we had only to contend with heavy rain and wild winds. These weather forces did abate and enabling the last ferry to sail. We did make it home for Christmas-which was most delightful.

This was just one of the many storms to hit our area this season. It has been approximately 10 years since we last experienced a relentless storm season. That was when Brian and I finally succumbed to the fear of losing everything in the freezer and bought a generator. I understand many island residents have made similar investments this year. It is handy to have some form of back-up power when storms knock out hydro service with such regularity or for long periods of time. Most report they were pleased with the timely response by BC Hydro to the severe damage to power lines/poles.

Shortly after New Year's celebrations I started to hear from folks who had lost their phone service during the December storms. Isolated and pocket outages are scattered across the island-many without phone service for over a month. Since then I have been in regular contact with Telus stressing that such lack of service is unacceptable and poses a huge safety risk for those unable to contact emergency services. WE are not alone in this situation. In response to the many phone calls, and letters written, Telus dispatched 5 technicians to Cortes January 10 and had a projected goal of completing all repairs by January 12. This was not possible and crews continued to repair telephone service through the weekend. I was told a line truck would be on the island today--January 15 but have been unable to confirm that. I have been keeping track of phones repaired and those still waiting—it enables me to have current, accurate information when communicating with Telus representatives or Claire Trevena.

A Public Meeting with BC Hydro was cancelled by the first major storm in November. The concept of the meeting has expanded to include Telus representatives. Current plans are to hold a joint Hydro/Telus meeting after storm season has passed. I have verbal confirmation that representatives from both service companies will attend. Ideally the meeting will take place sometime between March and late May. An announcement will be made when a date is confirmed.

The 7 km trail system associated with Siskin Park and surrounding area was also affected by the severe windstorms. Trees were windblown across trails throughout the network. A contractor has been contacted and cost assessments are underway. Regular users of the trail system can be assured this particular situation is being addressed.

As you might have gathered from this report, one of the side effects of the storms has been to turn me into the proverbial "squeaky wheel." I do hope everything will be restored shortly and that we are not troubled by another disruptive storm for some time. I am one of the many looking forward to the end of this storm season.

Surrounded by snow and cold my thoughts turn to pruning, seed orders, and plant starts. I anticipate snowdrops, primroses and crocus' bursting forth at the earliest opportunity. Until then, there's always a seed catalog to curl up with by the fire and dreams of gardens yet to be. Stay warm.

Feel free to contact me at 935-6488 Monday through Friday 9:00 am to 4 pm. If you get the answering machine try my cell phone -- 202-6488. You can also email me at brijen@oberon. ark.com anytime.

Once again, the Cortes Island School PAC would like to extend a huge thank-you to the individuals and businesses who so generously donated goods and services to our annual Winter Celebration Auction. This event always seems like a lot of work for the volunteers as it comes at the busy Holiday season, but it continues to be a worthwhile fundraiser as well as a great time for all who participate! We would also like to thank the community members who braved the storm to come out and enjoy the festivities! Without your support, we would not be able to pull off this special event. Extra thanks go out to Scott Lawrence, Stefano Savioli as well as Jane McDonald for their extra efforts to ensure that the winter Celebration was a success! We hope to see you all next year!

Free Wood?

There have been losts of power outages and very cold temperatures this Winter.

Some folks have indicated they may not have enought wood to last this particular Winter if things keep up as they have. And, of course, its next to impossible to get dry wood this time of

Can we do someting to help, if not this winter, at least for next winter? Free wood for those temporarily in need could be a possible answer to the problem. If we had a central location, we could build a shelter capable of holding 10 cords

Folks could be encouraged not to take more than a 2 weeks supply at a time so there would be wood left for other people.

If could operate like the free money program. Community wood left over from say the building of the new fire hall or from the community centre's future children's playground could be donated. People could take wood as needed and replace when they have a surplus of dry wood. It would be a case of recycling meeting real basic human needs.

Alot of us would like to think that on Quadra Island there are no human beings who are homelless, hungry or cold and for the most part that is true. Thanks to the food bank, the community lunch, free money, etc. but a home that's freezing just doesn't always feel like home. If we think globally and act locally, Quadra could be the kind of selfsufficient share-the-wealth model of community that we would like the future world to be.

Give me a call, if your interested in working on this project or if you have a site for the free wood pile, Steve at 285-3323

Community Kitchen News

As I write this, our Community Centre's water system is going through a significant overhaul, but Sandra Spearing tells me that all should be in order for our first community kitchen of 2007 on Wednesday, January 10th at noon. By the time you read this, we will likely have prepared 2 lunches already, on the 10th and the 17th, but there are quite a few more to come before we close it down in the spring at the end of May.

Come out every Wednesday at noon to your Community Centre for delicious homemade soups, raw veggies and fruit, homemade bread and baked goods as well as tea and coffee. It is lunch on a sliding scale: free if you need a free lunch, or you can contribute to the event by putting some money in the donation box.

The Community Kitchen people would like to extend special gratitude to the many door prize donors who helped to make our Christmas luncheon on Dec.20th such a big success. These donors were as follows:

Living Soul <www.livingsoul.ca>, Quadra Builders, Sioux Hartle, Quadra Crafts, Heriot Bay Inn, Gateway Café, People's Drug Mart, Explore Gallery, Heriot Bay Tru-Value, Hummingbird Office and Art Supplies, Quadra Foods, Terri Smith, E-Blend Homeschoolers, + at least two anonymous

I believe that we are blessed to be part of a community that is so generous.

On December 20th, we served about 190 bowls of stew, and the bakers must have been delighted to find out that 2 tables loaded with their donated goodies were "inhaled" in about 30 minutes. The donation box was very happy that day as well! We have now paid for our new refrigerator and freezer and are in a position to start making cash donations to Quadra's food bank.

Those of us who work to provide the community with a nutritious lunch at noon on Wednesdays hope that Quadra Islanders will continue to support this unique social event.

Thanks, Quadra! Questions? Comments? Want to help? Call Wayne at 285-3264

In order to facilitate the needs of the youngest tots, there is an area set up for their use. Please encourage older children to respect this.

Visiting families and grandparents welcome. All children must be under the age of five. We meet in the hall at the Quadra Island Community Centre on Thursdays, and through the winter months, on Mondays and Thursdays.

Friday Flicks Tonight! Crossing the Bridge: The Sound of Istanbul 7:45 January 19th, Q.C.C. Admission: $5.00, $4.00 stu/snr

Istanbul's fusion of East and West, traditional and modern is evident in the assortment of musicians who perform in Crossing the Bridge: the Sound of Istanbul.

German bassist Alexander Hacke is the tour guide on this musician's-eye view of the metropolis. The scruffy musicologist sits in with the groups he records or beams at them from the sidelines. He covers music from psychedelic underground, through hip-hop, rock, and anti-corporate buskers, to veteran traditionalists. This movie is resolutely celebratory as it carries viewers through various settings and intersperses vintage clips of Istanbul across the years. It is a rich and illuminating musical

Friday Flicks Presents: A Simple Curve

7:45 February 2nd, Q.C.C.

Set in the thrilling, blue-green Slocan Valley of the Kootenays, B.C. director Aubrey Nealon's debut feature, /A Simple Curve/, is a father-son comingof-age story with a difference. It's very much a race to see whether Jim, the film's rebellious hippie-dad, reaches maturity before Caleb, his sensible, starvedfor-experience son.

Caleb lives in a mountain paradise, with emerald lakes and acres of plush forest; a sacred, unspoiled Eden that his father, a conscientious objector, found when he fled America and the Vietnam War. Despite the wide-open spaces, Caleb is a smalltown kid who is running out of room, people and time. His mother has recently died. The father-son woodworking business is failing because his mastercarpenter Dad, 'Hash Oil' Jim, is far better with wood than people.

Nealon displays astute skill at good narrative construction. The story starts gently and grows more compelling as it glides along like a master woodworker's plane. Relationships are given real respect, explored with care and never reduced to sappy emotionalism. It is also bright with comic ambushes and well-placed zingers to lift the serious subtext and take the viewer along a real-life curve that leaves us well satisfied.

'A Simple Curve' was recently selected one of the top 10 Canadian films of 2005 by the Toronto International Film Festival Group. That would seem an overly modest distinction. There aren't half that many films on screens right now - Canadian or otherwise - that have the heart and mind of 'A Simple Curve'." (/Stephen Cole CBC.ca.)

New Season of Cultural Events kicks off with...

Autorickshaw

Autorickshaw stands for more than just a cheap and dangerous mode of Asian transportation. A motorized version of the traditional rickshaw, this modern machine combines the old with the new, respresenting both speed and freedom. Lying on the cutting edge between both Asian and Western cultures and musical forms, autorickshaw the band is a Canadian musical vehicle that blends traditional Indian classical music with contempory jazz and funk. Nominated for a Juno Award for world music album of the year in 2005, they won the 2005 Canadian Independent Music Award for world music artist of the year. Those impressive credentials, combined with their hip, exotic appeal, have made them the current darlings of the World Music scene.

Autorickshaw consists of a mash-up of four of Canada's most exciting and musically interesting young musicians: vocalist Suba Sankaran, tabla player Ed Hanley, bassist Rich Brown and exotic percussionist Debashis Sinha.

Aside from their sheer delight in making music, what makes Autorickshaw so irresistible is a deep commitment to their art forms. Rather than a mainstream blending of thin cultural references, their sound is a highly cultivated juxtaposition of authentic traditions, making for a unique, challenging and ultimately satisfying artistic offering. autorickshaw has toured widely in Canada, including appearances at the Montreal Jazz Festival, the Vancouver and Winnipeg Folk Festivals, as well a numerous appearances at the Glenn Gould Studio in Toronto. US appearances include performances at Joe's Pub in New York City and at The Kennedy Centre in Washington DC. Before their 2007 West Coast tour, they will be performing in India. Quadra Cultural Committee will be sponsoring their performance at the Community Centre on Saturday, January 27th, at 8pm. Advance tickets are available at Quadra Crafts, Hummingbird, and The Music Plant at $17 for adults and $40 for a family. They will be available at the door at $20 for adults and $45 for family. For information call 285 3560.

World Dance

World Dance begins January 18th at the QCC, Thursdays 7:30 - 9:00. Come out for some joyful, playful exercise. Stretching, isolations and dance basics that allow your body, mind and spirit the pleasure of natural movement to world beat rhythms. Call Angela Thurston @ 285-2963 for more info and to register. Seniors' News Br. 91, B.C.O.A.P.O.

Although we have had our fair share of winter wind storms, we were spared many of the blasts which rocked the Lower Mainland and wreaked havoc in Stanley Park and southern Vancouver Island. Even last week's snow, although it caused postponement of our January meeting till the 17th, was much less than that which fell in Victoria.

There have been a number of enquiries regarding membership in the Seniors, and we are pleased to welcome anyone to our monthly meetings, normally held on the first Wednesday in the month, beginning at 10:00am at the Legion on West Road. Newcomers receive a copy of the Policy & Information doument, together with our recently revised Constitution and Bylaws.

The aim is to make prospective members both welcome and informed about our activities.

Each week, other than the first Wednesday in the month, Tai Chi and Carpet Bowling take place at 10:00am and 10:30 am respectively. These activities will commence on January 24th.

Existing members are reminded that the membership fee for the year is due on or before the February meeting. It is likely the fees may be increased in the near future, and that may be sufficient incentive to rejoin at the present low rate!

Attention Artists

The 2007 Quadra Island Studio Tour (June 2&3) is filling up and interested artists should send in their application forms by Jan. 31. Some of the comments from last years show were, "The Studio Tour was great and you really got to see a big chunk of the Island seeing all 21 Studios!" and "Great to meet the artists and get a personal connection."

The show at the Community Centre drew rave reviews as well, "...liked having samples of artists work at the CC. That way (one) can decide which studios to visit."

The organizing committee, Quadra Island Artists is currently preparing a large advertising campaign aimed at attracting visitors from all parts of Vancouver Island and the lower mainland to the tour.

In addition to organizing the June 2nd and 3rd Studio tour, Quadra Island Artists is again creating the Year-Round Artist Studio & Gallery Guide for galleries and artists who wish to attract visitors to their studios over the entire summer or the year. Last year 5000 copies of the guide were printed and distributed at tourist outlets and businesses. Participating artists have noted a marked increase in visitors as a result of the year-round Artist Studio & Gallery Guide.

The deadline for submitting applications for both the 2007 Studio Tour and the 2007 Studio & Gallery Guide is Jan. 31.

Please pick up your application form at Hummingbird Office & Art Supplies.

Raw Foods for Better Health

The typical North American diet contains very few raw foods. This means most people need to increase the amount of raw foods in their diet. By coming to the raw food potluck you can eat a complete meal of raw foods.

There is more to raw foods than plain old tossed salad and carrot sticks. A raw meal can consist of a variety of different salads with home made fresh raw dressings, soups, fancy desserts, fruits, nuts, juices etc...

Most of the people who come to the potlucks are not 100% raw fooders. They come to learn more about raw foods and socialize with likeminded people. We have books of delicious recipes for you to browse through and we will be showing a health or raw food related video after the meal.

Bring a raw vegan food item to share and a small donation toward room rental and come and enjoy. new people are always welcome. next potluck is Sunday, January 21st 5-7 pm at the Quadra Community centre in Room 1. For more information phone Pat at 285-2377 or Joyce at 285-3827

News From Quadra Community Centre

People have been asking about the QCC water "challenges". First of all, let me say that the water is excellent: clean, pure and plentiful. However, this past year has been a journey starting with my turning on the tap Dec 2005 to find a slurry of sand splashing into the sink. Argh! This on a weekend of film night, singer's concert and Walcan Christmas dinner. Travelling through the land of well drillers, engineers and plumbers is one thing, but the VIHA rules and regs since Walkerton, is another saga, but here we are on the other side and all is well. All those up close want to express deep appreciation to plumber, Tom Rohan for many freebie hours of work; board member Teresa O'Brien for shouldering much of the decision making and 'herding cats'; Brian Simons, Eric Sorensen, Bob and Marg Lasby, Ian McEachern, and fearless leader through the jungle-- Rick Milne of Red Williams Drilling. Thank you to Red Williams as well, who has given sizeable donations to the community centre.

O.k. so demographics on the island have changed over the years and minor baseball has declined from 20 teams in the 90's to none. What's happening? I know the boomers' kids are gone, but is there really not enough interest amongst the 141 elementary kids who are left? Parents, if you want your kids to play ball, some one has to take the lead and get the populace fired up. We have the fields, the equipment and some money. Team sport teaches cooperation while developing physical prowess and it's fun. If this is important to you, let's hear from you. Mentoring is available.

Many events and activities are starting up for the Winter/Spring session at the community centre. If you lost your rec brochure, please come by and get another or log on to <www.quadraisland.ca> and browse or download it from the internet.

Film Fest Focuses on Solutions to Climate Change

Tlimate change is happening. There is no doubt about that," said Deb Cowper, one of the organizers of the Energy & Climate Change Film Festival taking place this Saturday, January 20 at the Quadra Community Centre.

The festival, hosted by Sierra Quadra, will feature a wide variety of films dealing with energy use and climate change/global warming. Key films include Al Gore's 'An Inconvenient Truth' and 'Who Killed the Electric Car?' A series of interesting (and, at times, humourous) shorts will fill out the program. There is no charge for admission.

Deb said the intent of the festival is to inform people about climate change and inspire them to act.

"Many of the films contain messages of hope, and suggest a variety of things that we can do, both personally and collectively, to take action against climate change. Altering the way we think about and use energy is a key part of the action so urgently required."

In the face of a lack of political resolve on climate change, the scientific community continues to sound the alarm. In 'An Inconvenient Truth', Al Gore points out that the vast majority of scientists agree that global warming is real, it's already happening, and that it is the result of our activities and not a natural occurrence.

Locally, islanders have seen the direct effects of drier summers that are hard on fish streams and well water levels, and have raised forest fire concerns. We have also weathered an unusual number of "severe wind events" this fall and winter. Some regions of Canada that normally experience biting cold have yet to see snow this season.

Deb observed that these noticeable shifts in the local climate are a call to action.

"We need to make changes now to drastically cut CO₂ (and other greenhouse gas) emissions if we are to have any chance of slowing the rate of climate change. If we continue hurtling forward on our current destructive path, the Earth's balances will undoubtedly reach a tipping point and life as we know it will be drastically altered," she said.

The huge scale of the problem can be daunting for individuals and families. We might want to make changes to reduce our carbon emissions, but where do we start? Deb suggests that attending the film festival is a great first step.

"The enormity of the climate change problems we face sometimes scares me, and sometimes I feel just plain inadequate. Then I have to remind myself that every change I make—no matter how small—is cumulative. Each person who attends the film festival is taking a step toward change, and that, to my mind, is the simple objective of it all."

Judy Leicester, who has also been working hard to organize the festival, stressed that the event will focus on solutions.

"The first step is for everybody—individuals, industries, and governments—to get informed. There are some wonderful things that groups around the world are doing. We hope people will be inspired by the films to take action," she said.

Judy added that Sierra Quadra chose to bring in a real mix of films.

"There are lots of light hearted moments and useful ideas for things we can do. We didn't want everybody to go home depressed."

One film, 'French Fries to Go', looks at a city's success with bio-diesel. Another, 'Power of Community', examines Cuba's sustainable lowenergy solutions developed after the country lost access to Soviet oil.

Sierra Quadra was inspired to organize the Energy & Climate Change Film Festival after hearing of similar events offered by chapters south of the border. The local group was able to order the films from an extensive list of titles made available by the Sierra Club of the U.S. Following the Quadra festival, the DVDs will travel to other chapters in BC.

Judy said climate change has been on her mind ever since she attended a presentation in Victoria that addressed, among other topics, the pine beetle epidemic. Pine beetles have thrived in BC's Interior in recent years due to warmer winters, and have inflicted major damage to the forests in the region.

"When you see the pictures and graphs of the epidemic, you realise how fast the beetles have spread," she said.

Judy said the speed of some of the changes that are happening around the world is mind boggling.

"Even scientists are astonished at how fast it is happening. It affects everybody. We can't leave this problem for the next generation to fix. We need to act now."

In the spirit of reducing carbon emissions, Sierra Quadra is offering free rides to and from the Campbell River and Cortes ferries for festival goers. Call Ken Roxburgh (285-2580) to arrange pick-up from the Campbell River ferry and Robyn Budd (285-3563) if you're travelling on the Cortes ferry.

Look for tasty food and beverages for sale, door prizes, and informative displays at the festival. The organizers hope for an excellent turnout, and encourage people to attend as much (or as little) as they like of the free all-day event.

See the Energy & Film Festival schedule on the facing page (page 10) for further details. For more information on climate change, visit www. climatecrisis.net

Early in the new year, we received greetings and a package of christmas cards from children, teachers and IAT staff thanking the Quadra community for its ongoing support. The following is excerpts of several letters over the past few months written by Betty Dumpao, teacher of the Bugnay preschool in the northern Philippines:

Dear Quadra Community,

Hi Hello!!! The first week of October was so cold that we decided to start our program at 9:00 instead of 8:00 in the morning since some of my pupils were coming late because of the cold. The following week we were very busy practicing our traditional dances since we were invited to attend the children's month celebrations at the Montessori School in Bulanao which we all enjoyed.

The mornings continued to be cold throughout the month of November. I have noticed a change in the children's character over the past month as they respond more easily to instructions and are becoming more mature. They enjoy coming to school every day and are very excited about exchanging a simple gift for our Christmas program next month. Often at lunch time several children come to my home to play with my daughter. At the same time some like to practice drawing and tracing. Sometimes they also come and do spelling with one acting as the teacher and the others as the students. They are no longer so shy as they were at one time, when only a few responded when I spoke to them.

Sometimes in the afternoon after school I call them to my house so they can practice beginning reading which they enjoy. I am so happy for the opportunity to receive my preschool training which I feel is so beneficial to me and the children. I love watching them develop and grow. Therefore, I continue to be appreciative of your support.

Christmas here is very enjoyable. Instead of a Christmas program we decided to have a picnic in order to share everyone's food. I have sent you a simple card to express how much I care about your concern for me and the children. Without your help I would not be working with these children and seeing their enjoyment and progress. I wish you a nice Christmas season in your place. Thankyou again.

Halliday's Viewpoint

by Steven Halliday

One-Sided Prosperity

n December 20, 2006 a headline in USA Today trumpeted "It's a Wall Street bonus bonanza" and then went on to describe how senior executives of leading investment firms such as Morgan Stanley, Goldman Sachs and Bear Sterns are set to receive bonuses totalling some US$23.9 billion for their efforts during the year. While the manna certainly accumulates thickest at the top, with Goldman CEO Lloyd Blankfein pocketing some $53.4 million and Morgan Stanley head honcho John Mack making do on a measly $40.2 million - in addition to their seven figure salaries, of course. But the shower of gold does reign down to the poor working traders as well - poor being a very relative term, of course. "The salaries on Wall Street are generally very small," says Alan Johnson of Johnson Associates, who advises financial firms on compensation matters. He says someone who makes only $150,000 to $200,000 in salary might get a $9.8 million bonus." By the way, this year's bonus total is a 17% increase from 2005's total of $20.5 billion. I don't know how you feel, but the numbers being bandied about here seem somewhat excessive in a society with a minimum wage of $5.15 per hour.

In the same vein, in December 5/06's edition of The Globe and Mail we learned, according to new UN study, that 2% of the world's adults own 51% of global assets, while the top 10% own 85% of those same assets. You might be glad to know that most of you fit within that 10% figure, since the threshold to reach that tier was ownership of more than US$61,000 in assets - Canada's mean wealth has been calculated at about $89,000 per person. But even owning assets with a value of $2,200 places a person in the top 50% of wealth distribution worldwide. Owning assets of more than $500,000 places you in the top 1% category, which, according to the study, numbers some 37 million members the poor, numbering well over 50% of the global population, own barely 1% of global wealth. One codicil though - the data used in the study is from 2000. Think things have gotten better since?

It's been a couple of years since I last wrote about the disparity between the incomes of what George Bush Jr. joked was his political base – "the haves and have-mores" – and the average working stiff, and sure enough the inequity has since grown. One measure that I often like to quote is the pay of a Fortune 500 CEO versus the average working stiff – in 2003 it was 185 times the average worker; by 2005 that factor had increased to 279. In comparison, in 1965 that ratio was 20 times. While researching this column I happened across an interesting report dated 2000 from the World Bank, wherein they point out that the number of people living in poverty (based on income) dropped from 29% in 1987 to 26% in 1998, though the actual number of people remained unchanged at about 1.2 billion. The World Bank's definition of poverty? Would you believe $1 per day is the measure? What happens if you make it $2 per day (still awfully damn poor by anyone's standards)? Over 50% of the global population, some 3 billion souls, struggle to get by on that amount or less per day – remarkably, the UN and World Bank agree that half the people on the planet own squat all and live on pennies a day.

This helps explain why I almost spat out my tea when I read Mr. Johnson's earlier description of $150-200,000 Wall Street salaries as "very small". How then, I wonder, would he label the equivalent annual salary of someone making today's US minimum wage, or $10,712 for 40 hours, 52 weeks a year? Infinitesimal should be about right. Of course, if Ms. Pelosi and her new Democratic majority have their way that number will rise to $15,080 within 2 years, a 41% jump. This will bring US minimum wage earners to a higher level than their Canadian counterparts, at least in BC where our minimum wage (which is adjusted far more than once a decade) is $8 per hour, or about US$6.80.

In both cases, however, it is an indisputable fact that minimum wage does not even pay what we euphemistically call "poverty level" income, which ranges from $16,273 for a single person in a small (< 30,000 pop.) town to $20,778 in a large urban centre, according to Stats Can 2005 Low Income Cut-off numbers. So in Canada we reckon you're poor if you live on less than $44.59 per day, while the World Bank figures any more than $2 per day and you escape the label? Rough numbers, I admit, but illustrative none the less, particularly as to Mr. Johnson's myopia regarding "very small" salaries.

So, yes, the rich really do own the world, and what a world it has become as they have become richer, faster. If one were to overlay an economic map (blue for wealth, red for poverty) on a globe you would see two glaring anomalies; virtually all the blue would be in Europe, North America and developed Asia including Austral-Asian nations, while all of Africa, and most of Asia's land mass and South America would be almost completely red. I would also speculate that if one were to further overlay population growth indices of some sort, it too would fall almost entirely in the red zones. A growing population with growing levels of poverty is a recipe for disaster that has played out before in human history, but never on a scale this vast. It is no wonder that today's trouble spots, and those considered by most western authorities to be tomorrow's, all fall within those same red areas of the globe. Issues related to global warming will certainly complicate the global wealth disparity problem, but before the world can go green much more of it needs to become blue, if you'll excuse a terrible pun.

All of us living in the my metaphorical blue world have benefited from economic globalization, often at the expense of others living in the red world; think "sweat shops", "resource exploitation" and in many cases "privatization" here folks. It will require a massive change of mindset at the very highest levels before any serious effort to reduce the growing dangers of global economic disparity, and it will require an investment of literally hundreds of billions of dollars to start to fix it. But the money is there - last year's global military expenditure was over $800 billion – it is the motivation that is missing. Globalization brings benefits to be sure, but it also brings responsibilities that have up until now been ignored. A growing number of people are coming to realize we ignore them at our peril.
